Jasper Voyles, Grandson of David & Barbara Ida Voyles, owned the original farm of David's who came to Ind. in 1813 Built his cabin in 1814
Present Kitchen on east end of house is original poplar cabin. David built another cabin west of the first one. Later built room between the 2 cabins, thus he had a long house with a loft. Only Voyles' lived in the house until Jasper died and it was sold to Ben Compton. Jasper had water piped to his cattle from the spring that David found when he chose his homesite This spring never ran dry.

ROLIN VOYLES CEMETERY

Located SW qr Sec. 25-1-3

This cemetery is located nearby the Lindsey and Clarissa Voyles-the sign over the new gate-way reading 1822--1914; 1830--1916. This old log house with the three rock chimneys was built before the Civil War. The rocks were quarried and laid up by a colored hand, whose two colored children are buried in the cemetery. The original barn, also, is still standing and still in use for the work horses on the farm.

ROLAND VOYLES - July 14, 1778 - Aug. 12 1833 - reputed from the bite of a mad dog.

ELIZABETH LINGLE VOYLES - Mar 27, 1788 - Sept 13, 1859. (Moses Voyles - a son - after his old age lettered these markers after they had become defaced by the ravages of time).

POLLY - wife of Jacob Gresham - Jan 18, 1813 - June 11, 1854. She dau. of Rolin & Elizabeth & sister of Moses. Moses had decorated the stone with a series of dots - one instance in the shape of a heart - with a nail punch or hot drill.

SALLY - wife of William Hartley - d. Dec. 19, 1863 -- aged 21 yrs. She is the dau. of Jacob and Polly Gresham.

JACOB GRESHAM -- a sunken grave next to the Hartley marker is known by the relatives of these to be that of Jacob.

* JOHN VOYLES - together with two bros., sons of Rolin died of milk sickness - graves are now unmarked.

2 colored children known to be buried here. Children of "Niger Daniels".

A lane is kept open from the highway in front of the woods where the cemetery is located. It is clean and free from briars, sassafras and other things so detrimental to abandoned cemeteries. It is fenced with a wire fence with an opening left open at the Sw corner. There are still to be seen three rows of graves about 5 to the row. Other rocks on the outside of the fence indicate that it has been at one time much larger than now.

Jacob Purlee and Billie Charles are the earliest settlers Mr. Sims remembers hearing of. Can we play up the petrified Indian in the Charles Cave? The front part of the Cabe, as seen from the picture has already caved in. One huge rock was known to have come down about forty years ago. Could the petrified Indian have been in this part?

Sherd Bishop farm

Log barn still in use was once a part of Priscilla Smith's home. She was the dau. of Daniel Voyles by his second marriage. It is tradition that Polly White of N.C. was his first wife. But here in this cemetery is the grave of Sarah Voyles - wife of Daniel Voyles. She may be the second wife and presumably Priscilla Smith's mother.

It is located at a beautiful bend of Lower Blue River and very close to the high west bluff of the stream, just above the Harmon Ford. This ford is still deep and treacherous as a fine span of horses recently drowned there and the driver had to swim for his life.

The old rock-walled spring where the milk house stook still has the rock foundation but the spring has dried up and the house long since gone. A beautiful location for a home at this river bend above the ford.

Only six markers with inscreitions remain:

ABEL VOYLES - June 20, 1786 - Feb. 2, 1866 -- 80 yrs.

PRISCILLA SMITH - Aug. 13, 1820 - Aug. 28, 1896.

NATHAN SMITH - Feb. 15, 1818 - Mar. 31, 1864.

WILLIAM VANMETER -
HARRIETT VANMETER - both of these are children.

SARAH VOYLES - wife of Daniel Voyles. B. Oct. 30, 1798 - d. Oct. 31, 1822

There have been 32 graves in this cemetery, perhaps more.

At the close of the Civil War when the boys were returning home again--a party was being thrown at the home of Moses and Sally Voyles. The Christian Church had strictly forbidden that dancing should be enjoyed in any home of any of the members. The young folks wanted to celebrate; games such as Dan Tucker, Mulberry Bush and Weavelly Wheat were played and eats were spread and a general good time was enjoyed by all.

On the following Sunday, Moses and Sally Wilson Voyles were called upon to acknowledge the fact that dancing had gone on in their home, whereupon they were to be"churched"for permitting such conduct. Sally listened for a time and when it came her turn to testify she did, gladly. "It may be harmful to permit dancing--such innocent games as they werein those days-- but there are several Elders and Deacons in the Church ,here who have been known to have given plenty of assistance to the "Knights Of The Golden Circle "and she continued"Is it a greater sin to let young people enjoy themselves than to serve a renegade circle whose purpose it was to dissolve the Union of the U.S.?Emanuel Johnson sprang to his feet and named them-one by one, coming to her rescue. Jimmy Rudder

Moses and Sally Wilson Voyles were not churched. They sleep today in the "Big Spring" burial ground, still a strong Church of Christ congregation.

DAVID VOYLES

[The Salem Democrat, September 6, 1876, Pioneer Pickings Number 67--One of the old men and old settlers of this county is David Voyles. We chanced to see him not long since, and obtained some ancient items, so to speak from him. He was born in Cabarras county, North Carolina, in 1787, being now eighty-nine years of age. He said that he was descendant of "Imported Stock." His father was a Welshman, and a native of Wales, and his mother was an Italian, and that the peculiar traits of both nations could yet be seen, more or less, in their descendants. His father died in North Carolina, leaving a widow with five children. Seven years after his father's death, his mother died, and in compliance with her wish, everything but the farm was sold. The family being destitute of nearly everything, made their living by raising cotton and selling it at Charlestown (sic), South Carolina, a distance of two hundred and forty miles. After his brother, Abraham, and himself became of age, they applied to court for a partition of the farm left by their father, and it was divided up between the children. David then concluded it was not good for a man to be along, so he went courting around until he found a "bonnie lass" to suit him, and whom he afterwards married. He remained in the old North State three years after his marriage, and on November 2, 1814, he started for the Indiana Territory, and arrived on Blue River in Washington county, December 10, 1814, he camped on the farm where James McCool now lives. On the Sunday following, a party of settlers, including Voyles rode through the woods in search of water or springs of water either, and finally found a dripping spring where Voyles finally settled, and where he lives now. The Monday morning after, he took his ax and commenced preparing logs for him a house, and cut half enough that day for a cabin fourteen feet by sixteen. He then "betook himself to thinking" of the hardships associated with such a life in such a country and finally shouldered his ax and resolved never to see the place again. He started to his wife and children but neglected to say where they were at that time, and that night he staid with one of his father's old mess-mates in the revolutionary war. He persuaded David to return to his work and finish his cabin, and go on with his work. In the morning he went back and finished cutting his logs. He then hauled them to the proper place, and with the help of a few neighbors, had his cabin raised. He then went for his wife and children and brought them to his cabin and put them into it without roof or floor. With the help of two men, he began covering his domicile, battling all the time with a snow storm, which raged furiously, his wife, carrying the clapboards, and trying to protect the children from the pitiless storm. He soon had his cabin in pretty good order, and they passed their time very pleasantly in their wilderness home. Being of iron constitution and a strong robust physical frame, he, with the aid of his industrious and economical wife got along splendidly. The country was very thinly settled at the time of his arrival. There was but one house then, where the city of New Albany is today. He only knew of three churches in the whole country, a Methodist church at Fredericksburg, a Baptist church where Harrison Denny now lives in Pierce Township, and another in Howard Township on Blue River.

This contains the items that are on the video that Margaret took in Southern Indiana. Places, people, and the cemetaries and some comments that might have been made.

PLACES:

Ben and Minnie Klinker's home in Palmyra, Indiana
First Baptist Church where they went and where Ben was the choir director.
The house Lewis Klinker (my grandfather) built when my mom, Mary, was a baby and is south of Salem, Indiana. Grandpa Lewis would take the wagon to Salem and haul back materials for the house. The family slept in the barn while the house was being built and cooked in the old summer kitchen.
Cora and Bill Avery's house, owned now by Jean Feiock.
George and Mable Voyles Miller's house
Henry and Mary Lamping Klinker's house west of Palmyra. It was then purchased by Lena Libka, their daughter, when the parents died. West and North of Palmyra — in Washington Twp.

Margaret Haub, Palmyra, 85 years old
I think this woman said that Sophia and William Haub were her mother and father but none of that ~~works~~ out. Perhaps they were her aunt and uncle meaning she could have been a daughter of one of William's brothers. She doesn't give any indication of ever being married as she talks about only her sister's family. Or I suppose she might have been married to one of the boys and just called William and Sophie her parents. However, she says that she lived with her father after the death of her mother at 37 years of age and Sophia lived to be 71. Margaret said that her sister, Bertha, married in 1931 and had 5 children and died in 1982. And that she has a brother that made brooms. (Margaret is Lucy's daughter)

Added notes:

Henry and Mary Klinker's home may still be in the family. Not sure. To get to it .. go West of Palmyra on 150, or to 150, West and right on McDracken and about 1½ mile.

Nora Compton tells about hearing the story that there was a baby, about 2 years old, that made the crossing with Henry and Mary and the baby died and she said that a whale followed the boat and then after two days they had to throw the baby overboard. She thinks the baby belonged to Henry and Mary, but as with these boat stories seems everyone wants to claim them for their family. We simply do not know.

Amanda Simpson married Rudolph Miller and her sister
Barbara Simpson married Leonard Miller, Rudolph's brother
so two sisters married two brothers.

Jean Feiock said that her grandmother married a Miller that was not a relative of the family at that time so I guess she was talking about Gottlieb Miller. So he was probably of another Miller family.
